The annual infectious disease seminar at the University of Porto will focus on HIV and Hepatitis. Leading Portuguese scholars together with foreign experts and community members will present the latest issues regarding these two infectious diseases. Epidemiology, research methodology, health policy and current substantive data will be presented in a series of interactive sessions at the Institute of Public Health, Porto. Join us to debate, discuss and uncover why two preventable and treatable infections continue to be major public health issues in Europe, despite national and regional interventions and policies to prevent, treat and eventually eliminate them.
